speaks, says: "Proceedings against the members of the old Tammany Ring have advanced so far that there is no longer any reason to doubt that judgments against them will be obtained and a great deal of their property reached. All of their money or property within the jurisdiction of the State, including such of Tweed's as was alienated without due consideration, will be attached. Among the payments already tached is that which was conveyed to Mrs. McMillen. Natural love is not a good consideration in respect to the hold that the true owner has upon property; that is to say, if a man gives his wife and children property obtained by theft or fraud, it cannot be held by them against the owner of it, or the fund invested in it. Unnatural love is, if possible, a more untenable hold. According to the third of the Remedy Law when suit is instituted in a foreign jurisdiction, the title to the property claimed is to be vested in the State. The object of this legislation was to give additional force to the effort to recover the fund despoiled by the Ring men. In nearly every civilized country it is supposed a recovery of this kind can be made. Of course such a recovery is more likely to be sustained when brought by the State than when brought by the Aldermen, men, the Board of Supervisors, or the Mayor.

has cooperated with Mr. Charles O'Connor in the movements against the old Tammany Ring. After the laws under which these suits are instituted were passed, Mr. Peckham sent a messenger to Albany, bearing a request from Mr. O'Connor and the other council in the case, asking himself, that he should be cautioned, in order that he might be a witness. Even his affidavit could not have been taken had he not been restored to citizenship. Ingersoll was not for an entirely distinct transaction. It is in the usual course of the procedure of the Executive Department in such cases that the affidavits, in which the names of disabled persons may be taken. Three years ago much was said about the large amount of money that Tweed was said to owe to Ingersoll. Ingersoll will probably not lose it. The affidavits of Ingersoll and the other papers in the suits were drawn up by Mr. O'Connor, after a two months' sifting of the evidence.

Presbyterian Churches in order to check the advance of Romanism. President Scott, in response, congratulated Dr. Imbri, and said he was heartily in favor of the proposition. He was for the union of all the Protestant denominations to stop the advances and encroachments of Popery and Romanism. He earnestly exhorted the delegates to pray fervently that the power of Popery may not be able to acquire any political influence in this country, and that the Protestants may be enabled to defend themselves against their attacks. He thought the appointment of a Cardinal was contrary to the Constitution.
